was on very friendly terms with the rulers of Vaspurakan and it is likely that his family resented Muflih's carnage in that kingdom.

It is less tempting to suspect in بالدويه the sipahbadh of Mūqān ابن دلوله (?) who is once mentioned among the opponents of Daysam in 326/938.

The episode of Muflih's flight to Sharvan surely finds some support in the indirect evidence of other sources and it is interesting as a test of reliability of the Ta'rikh al-Bāb.

(c) The northward expansion of the Daylamites¹ began after 330/941 when Marzubān and Vahsūdān (sons of Muhammad) agreed that the latter should remain in the hereditary Tārom and the former should undertake the conquest of Azarbayjan and the adjoining lands. There are indications that by 344/955 Marzubān's sway extended up to Darband, see below note to §35. The initial expulsion of the Daylamites from Sharvan is a new fact, though the agreement which followed this success possibly included a clause concerning the payment of a tribute.

The concession which Abū-Tāhir Yazīd made to the people of al-Bāb to secure their help against the Daylamites finds some explanation in the Darband-nāma.² In the year 270/883 (or 272/885) the caliph (Mu'tamid, or his brother and co-regent Muwaffaq?) issued an order by which he bestowed on the people of Darband the revenue of the oil-wells and the salt-lakes of the Bākū region. Muhammad b. 'Ammār was appointed superintendent to collect the yearly income and to distribute it among the warriors of Darband. In 290/903 the new superintendent appropriated the revenues, and seized two villages belonging to Darband in the neighbourhood of Shābarān. The people of Darband, deprived of the subventions, gave themselves up to trade and neglected their military duties. This encouraged the Khazars to besiege the town but they were beaten off under the command of the governor Muhammad b. Hāshim b. Surāqa. (After that) Muhammad b. Yazīd (the father of Abū-Tāhir Yazīd, who ruled before 305/917?) became the ruler of Darband. He appointed a steward (nāẓir) over the oil-wells and salt lakes and sealed an act by which the products were conceded to Darband. The record preserved in the Darband-nāma fits into our scheme (§7) and seems to belong to the original unabridged Ta'rikh al-Bāb.

(d) The reference to the plans of common action of Sharvan and the Daylamites against the Rūm, the Georgians and other infidels, figures in our text between the years 333/944 and 337/948. The object of the agreement was probably restricted to the Kur basin, for Daylamite attacks against Armenia began at a later date. It is true that in 938 Lashkarī b. Mardī, a lieutenant of the Ziyārid Wushmagīr, led an ill-starred raid into the territory of the Armenian kingdom of Vaspurakan, but the earliest known Daylamite inroads into the Bagratid Armenia

² Ed. Kazem-bek, pp. 136, 138 and 228. I combine the details of three different MSS. For the earlier time see Balādhurī, 210: under the caliph Manṣūr the governor Yazīd b. Usayd al-Sulami "sent someone to the oil-wells and salt-mines of the country of Sharvān and levied taxes on them. He put someone in charge of them". Here the destination of the revenue is uncertain.
